【Continuation of last week's sermon summary】

↘His work and sanctifies (separates from others) them from the time they are in their mother's womb.Motokichiro Osaka writes Paul believed that the fact that a sinner like himself had been chosen must inevitably be considered as God's predestination. ...For some people are predestined, and for some individuals there is a period of depravity during which they must wander for some years. But he who is destined for the angels, though he stumbles along the way and sins, is destined at last to come to God. The words "mission" and "vocation" did not exist in the Meiji Era, but were coined after that time. A mission is something related to a person's vocation, which is still of this world. A vocation, on the other hand, is a calling of God before the creation of the world, and is not merely a matter of vocation, but means that the whole person who is born is called by God. ...Saul, who used to boast of his family origin, his strict observance of the law, his erudition, and his health, heard a voice from heaven calling him Saul, Saul. He who is called and possessed by Christ, who is thus called, is a believer. We must respond to this solemn call."Some boast in the things of this world, but we boast in Christ. We are not called to do well in the things of this world. I was chosen and called to speak of Christ. That is why I will not stop talking about Christ. Let us all consider what it means to be called as Christians and respond to this solemn calling.
