【Continuation of last week's sermon summary】

▽ The Bible does not say when or how the water was turned into wine. What is not written need not be considered. What matters is that God performs marvelous works in ways unknown to humans, without their awareness. The steward called the bridegroom and said, “Everyone serves the good wine first, and when the guests have drunk freely, then the inferior wine is served. But you have kept the good wine until now.” “ (verse 10) The words “you have kept the best wine until now” are a prophecy spoken through the steward's mouth, representing the Gospel.

Many people misunderstand this world. They believe that good things are given first, gradually diminish, and by life's end, everything is lost. But it is exactly the opposite. The very best is reserved for the end. Christ, who is God, has stored up the good things in heaven to be given after human labor is finished. These good things are called “eternal life, the likeness of Christ, and imperishable heavenly treasures.”

Recently, someone asked me, “What does it mean to bear fruit? If I grow old and become stubborn, won't I be unable to bear fruit like Christ?” Now is the time for labor, not for reward. The wage of eternal life is paid only after this world's labor is finished. Even if we cannot bear fruit like Christ in this world, I believe we will bear it in the next. In this world, I think we should simply strive as much as possible to become like Christ. Let us continue to work on this body, looking forward to inheriting wonderful fruit in the next life as we live out this one.
